LAS VEGAS
WEEKEND RESIDENCY · A STRATEGIC ADD-ON

THREE MOVES — AND EVERY ONE MAKES MONEY.

This is not a cost you hope earns its keep. Each of these three moves puts money in the building on its own — repeat visitors, a sponsorship that more than pays for itself, and high-margin merch — and they stack.

01

THE ACTORS TURN VISITORS INTO REGULARS

Like Comic-Con, the real stars behind the artifacts give fans a reason to keep coming back. One-and-done tourists become repeat ticket buyers — more gate on the same foot traffic.

+ MORE REPEAT-TICKET REVENUE

02

THE SPONSOR PAYS FOR MORE THAN THE ACTORS

A title sponsor underwrites the appearance fees and brings co-marketing that advertises the whole event. The talent is paid for, with a marketing engine and margin to spare.

+ SPONSOR SURPLUS + FREE MARKETING

03

CUSTOM MERCH IS PURE MARGIN

Every fan walks our custom Icons-of-Darkness line on the way out. Branded product at retail markup is the highest-margin dollar in the building — straight add-on profit per head.

+ HIGH-MARGIN PRODUCT SALES

Three profit centers on assets you already own — not a break-even bet on goodwill. At the multiple attractions sell for, that profit becomes millions in added value.

A REASON TO COME BACK — EVERY WEEKEND.

Hollywood's Icons of Darkness holds the world's largest private collection of authentic screen-used memorabilia — but as a static walkthrough it carries the structural flaw of every museum-style attraction: it is a one-and-done visit. The Weekend Residency closes that gap by layering a recurring live-event calendar onto the artifacts already in the building.

The model rests on an underused truth: a deep roster of beloved genre actors works the convention circuit week to week, and no premium venue has ever offered them a home worthy of their legacy.

That structure is the moat. Treating the people who built these franchises with dignity is the most bookable, repeatable, and defensible program in the market. It books faster, retains talent, and earns press and goodwill paid marketing cannot buy.

The result: a one-time ticket becomes a weekly destination — repeat visits, premium upsells, a fresh national hook every few weeks, and casino-driving foot traffic — with no new permanent build-out.

TURN A ONE-AND-DONE WALKTHROUGH INTO A WEEKLY DESTINATION.

We book the real actors behind the artifacts for rotating weekends — autographs, photo ops, meet-and-greets — beside the actual props from their own films. Nobody else on earth can offer that pairing.

ANCHOR

Genre royalty at sensible terms — the backbone of the calendar.

CIRCUIT

Affordable, available, grateful working talent — the hungry-icon core.

PREMIUM

Marquee, headline-only gets — crossover fame, scarcity, special-weekend energy.

Appearances, photo ops, and marketing run under standard convention-style talent agreements and likeness / NIL releases — the same clearances every major fan convention operates under, so the talent-IP and likeness exposure is handled up front.

THE WALL OF LEGENDS.

Every name fact-checked alive and circuit-active. Tier badges show the booking lane; ⚠️ flags an honest age/health note re-confirmed immediately before contracting — risk managed, not risk taken.

ANCHOR-SPONSOR TARGET: AMAZON MGM STUDIOS.

Land an anchor sponsor to underwrite the appearance fees, and the calendar is paid for before a ticket sells. Amazon MGM is the lead target, warm door through Kevin Wilson (Domestic Theatrical Distribution). A target profile, not a signed deal — here's why it's a no-brainer for them:

Pocket change. A year of genre-talent fees is a rounding error against an Amazon MGM marketing budget — less than a single trailer.

It's literally their job. Promote a current release with its star and real props on the Strip — and when there's no new title, the deep Prime Video horror catalog is the inventory to push.

The flywheel prints engagement. The exhibit sends people home to stream on Prime; Prime sends subscribers to the props. Every loop is measurable Prime viewership — the metric Amazon buys.

A marquee Vegas flagship. A branded, press-ready activation on the most-visited entertainment Strip on earth — zero build risk. We deliver the room, the talent, and the calendar.

Net to a sponsor like Amazon: cheap, on-strategy, engagement-driving. Net to Icons: the talent calendar fully funded by the sponsor. (Target profile, not a closed deal — Shudder/AMC and other studio/streamer partners are clean fallbacks.)

A FULL MERCH LINE — ONE MARK.

Apparel, drinkware, the Vegas drops, and the cigar set — every piece on the Icons-of-Darkness brand, clear of any studio character IP so it ships at launch. Designed & produced by Babycakes Design Studio.

MIKE GONZALEZ

PRODUCER

CASTING · PRODUCING · SAG-AFTRA ·
WEAPONS-MASTER

☆ THE PRODUCER

This program doesn't need a producer hired into it — it arrives with one. A room built on screen-used artifacts and live talent takes a single person who can cast it, win the actors' trust, produce the show, and handle the real pieces with credibility. Mike Gonzalez is all four at once: a casting director who knows what makes an agent say yes; a producer who assembles talent, locations, music, wardrobe and sponsors into one room that opens on time; a SAG-AFTRA actor the talent trusts as one of their own; and a former weapons-master who can present and authenticate the collection.

He isn't asking for a seat at the table — he set it. He spent a career producing before he had the title — bringing the talent, the locations, the music, the wardrobe and the sponsors while others took the credit. This is the project where all of it points at one target, and it comes to you already in his hands.

EVERY NUMBER — AND WHERE IT COMES FROM.

We'd rather quote a conservative figure we can defend than a headline number we can't. These are published, sourced benchmarks, and our model assumes a fraction of them, not the ceiling.

THE ASK IS SMALL, AND IT'S PHASED.

One yes: a phased pilot — the actor-friendly model on a handful of marquee + reunion weekends, to prove the gate uplift and merch capture against the conservative base before scaling to the full slate. I bring the program, the talent, and the sponsor, and I produce it.

A near-zero-downside test of a program modeled to add $1.6M–$5M in enterprise value — funded by a sponsor, on assets you already own.
